SAPPER TRIED FOR ATTACK UPON GIRL.

Ethel Heinze Made Serious Allegation Against Union-town Driver.

SENTENCES HANDED DOWN

Judge Umel Passes On Prisoners Who Were Convicted or Entered Pleas of Guilty—Nearly All Up Were Negroes.

Special to the Courier.

UNIONTOWN, March 18.—Fred Sapp was placed on trial this morning before Judge J. Q. Van Swaayen on a charge of assault and battery with intent to ravish and carrying concealed weapons. Miss Ethel Heinze is the prosecutrix. She alleged that on February 16, along the ridge near the Summit, Sapper attacked her and threatened her life with a revolver unless she submitted to his desires. The timely arrival of Robert Shaffer, a former Uniontown policeman, saved her. Miss Heinze, who is about 20 years old, worked as a domestic in the home of H. E. Leonard in Uniontown. Sapper drove to Leonard's at Stone's furniture store and, at his team in the stable at Leonard's home. He took the girl and driving the night the alleged attack occurred.

Sapper's defense was that the girl had agreed to accompany him to the mountains for illicit purposes but that she defrauded after they had driven into the country. The testimony was decidedly split throughout. Sapper denied threatening the girl with the revolver. The case went to the jury at noon.

Judge Umel held a session of several hours in the small court room. Nearly all the prisoners were those who had been convicted before him on material pleas of guilty. The most severe sentence was that given Stithon Miller, a negro, who was sent to the penitentiary for two years for robbery. Miller denied guilt but a previous bad record was against him.

Joseph Ross, the Dunbar negro, drew from Judge Umel regrets that the law did not provide steeper punishment. Ross was convicted of arson and non-support, and his sentence was alleged towards one of his children. Ross was directed to give $200 bond to pay his wife $250 a week or go to the workhouse for a year. As he will probably go to the workhouse, Judge Umel did not pass sentence on the arson charge, leaving that at noon.

W. M. Gialraith, convicted of forgery, was sent to Huntington. The money received was returned and the costs paid.

Thomas C. Duffy, prosecuted by his wife for assault and battery, was sent to jail for 60 days. Jon Clavie and John Harris, prosecuted for murderous assault upon E. Bernt, were sent to the workhouse for a year and six months each.

Suspension was deferred in the case of William King, arrested in Connellsville for attempting to assault Mrs. Edith Want. Joseph Moreland of South Connellsville, who pleaded guilty to vagrancy and promised to settle the costs, failed to do so and was sent to jail until he can think up some way of getting the money.

Andy Farwell drew 60 days to jail for assault and battery but will get out at the end of 30 if he pays the costs. Hugh Cooper, drawn three months to jail for failing to restrain Donville Battaglia from going to jail for 50 days for failing to pay a board bill.

Mike Schobt was given 20 days in jail for stealing the top from a newling named A. Claybrook and Robert Cargill, convicted of highway robbery, went to the workhouse for 18 months.

Charles Bell of Ohio, convicted of desertion and non-support was directed to give $200 bond guaranteeing the payment of $2 a week to his wife or go to jail for one year. John Gillard was given a year in jail for breaking into a jewelry store. Myrtle Van Riper was taxed the costs, protracted against Constance S. M. Murray, who said the jury acquitted of assault and battery.

Samiee Morris, Klem, Max Saffer, David Saffer and William Hesler were acquitted yesterday for stealing the five books of Moses from Rabbi Kolodick of Fayette City and this morning the jury seated verdict was read acquitting William Heyler of killing the Rabbits wife on the knee. The costs were divided.

Hanmer's injury recovered. The boy, 14, a student at Lookout No. 7 in the Monongahela river early in the week, was recovered yesterday.

Regular Regiments Are Prepared to Take Field on Border Immediately.

United Press Telegram.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 18.—Secret orders were issued today to the regimental commanders to prepare the division here for instant field service in actual war conditions. The 1,000 new recruits are being organized for rifle practice.

Portion of equipment has been loaded on special trains for immediate shipment. There are enough Southern Pacific cars being held here to throw the cavalry brigade across the border in 24 hours. Action is expected within the next week, if at all.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 18.—Urgent early relief is afforded from the action of the Mexican insurgents in cutting off the coal supply by severing railroads connecting the plants of the American Smelting & Securities Company of Mexico will close, according to reports from Consular agent at Juarez, Mexico, received by the State Department today.

The closing down of the plants, it is said, will throw 9,000 persons out of employment, stop a pay roll of $90,000 a month and bring destruction to 50,000 people.

The American Smelting Securities Company is a part of the Guggenheim mining syndicate of the United States.

A German Naval Expert's Views On Japan's Attitude Toward America.

United Press Special.
BERLIN, March 15—"An American naval base, constructed in the Philippines, is an intolerable menace to Japan. Supremacy in the waters of the Far East is a life necessity to Japan, and her statesmen, realizing this, are planning to strike, and strike soon," declared Count Ernest Reichenow, Germany's most noted strategical expert and writer on military subjects. He will publish in a few days a carefully prepared essay on Sino-American relations of which he has advanced proofs.

"It will not be denied even by those who have hitherto been skeptical," says the Count, "that Japan is preparing for an aggressive war against the United States. The main object of the war against Russia was not the annexation of land, but to prevent permanent occupation by Russia of Korea, Kwantung and Port Arthur.

"Leading Japanese statesmen are now convinced that Japan, as a great power, cannot continue to exist unless she possesses naval supremacy in the Pacific. She must continue to command the Chinese market. America is her rival there, and the Panama Canal has for one of its main objects the control of the Chinese markets by creating a shorter way of communication between America's Atlantic port and the Chinese coast.

The Japanese plans for conquest provide for the seizure of the Philippines, the Hawaiian Islands, the American Samoa Islands, Guam, by this means Japan would create a permanent and undisturbed advantage for herself. The most powerful and most fleet conceivable would be helpless in such an immense area of operation as the Pacific ocean without advanced bases, so that the capture of those islands by the Japanese would render that country the undisputed mistress of the Pacific ocean."

"There is no doubt that Japan in a position to seize these islands, because they are either unfortified, or insufficiently fortified, and often without protection by the American fleet.

It is impossible.

"Sudden seizure of these islands is neither improbable nor impossible. It must be remembered that the time is rapidly approaching when Japan will be compelled to defend her political and commercial position under less favorable circumstances so that this reason operates in favor of the earliest possible seizure of the American Pacific possessions. That American officials realize this is shown by the fervent desire to fortify the Panama canal.

"The Japanese attitude towards the use of the Philippines as a naval base was corroborated by the fact that the large landing deck, convoyed to Olongapo with great difficulties, developed a leak in the most inexplicable manner and sank. This and many circumstances that have been kept quiet show that Japan is almost ready to strike.

Amherst, Calif., and Manila, Japan; Manila, Japan, and Manila, China; before the American fleet grows to such extent that its superiority over the Japanese navy is no longer certain.

The Count never fails to criticize the United States for failing properly to fortify its Pacific possessions and refers to the fact that Admiral Dewey, immediately after the Portsmouth peace conference, said Japan would soon become too powerful for the United States. Japan was hard at work preparing for war, he says, when the American fleet went to the Pacific and this produced "temporary tranquility" but Japan is now ready to strike.

CONVALESCENTS.

United Press Special.
WASHINGTON, March 15—Edward Douglass White, the new Chief Justice, is one of the most modest of public officials. This lack of self-conceit marks him as the successor of the Highest Court, the new Chief Justice.

Since time immemorial, it has been the rule of the Supreme Court to nominate an associate justice from the circuit of the highest court, the circuit of the Supreme Court of the United States.

When Chief Justice White died, Associate Justice James C. Bradley, an associate justice as well as preceding member of the Bench, the ballot was instead to make this nomination. Bradley was nominated by the circuit of the United States since at that time there was no Chief Justice.

As such, while White was chosen preceding Bradley, he attached himself to the fact that he should order the ballot to nominate the associate justice to formula of nominating the associate justice of the Supreme Court." The new head of the Court, however, has reported that he has not been asked to have it changed to call attention to himself.

It is known that White violates tradition by deliberately announcing his name and precedent and tradition are not likely to violate the Supreme Court's rules.

White, however, hasn't yet succeeded in derailing the ancient tradition of having up to three associate judges on the bench, chamber, and there is a question in the shape of a few small steel pins and penholders for seal use.

Responsibility for the plague which has already caused the death of thousands in China and Manchuria, has been placed upon a little animal called by bombing the American government, by the exacting of the source of the contagion.

This Chinese woodchuck has long been known as subject to the plague, but the disease being transmitted by fleas always breaks out on the bodies of the animals.

From the time it first started in Eastern Mongolia, and thence spread all through Manchuria.

Had it not been for the meteoric rise of the plague, the Chinese overrunning the country, the plague would not now be ravaging so much of the world.

Now that the world is spread with the animal, which they call "man to man" for superstitious and religious reasons of about fifty each, and their habits resemble those of the American people, the Chinese are now more than ever, their superstitions have been overcome by the high price of man's squalor.

The number of trappers has increased tenfold, and the plague was spread to the north, from Harbin to the sea coast.

This year the trappers took the skins to Harbin, and when captured brought the disease infection, transferred from the fleas infesting the animals to them. From Harbin, after selling their catch, and coming to the south, where the plague was spreading in Manchuria, the Chinese with fear of the animal.

In the year 1900, however, their superstitions have been overcome by the high price of man's squalor.

The number of trappers has increased tenfold, and the plague was spread to the north, from Harbin to the sea coast.

THE RAILROAD

"The member of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, speaking apparently for itself alone and not for any community of interest, to the charge of discrimination against the Pittsburgh region in the matter of coal freight rates to the lake, is much more complete and emphatic than the joint answer of the Connellsville coke region railroads to a similar charge.

In the latter case discrimination was admitted in the one specific case charged in the complaint, but in the Pittsburgh coal operators' complaint everything is denied and proof is demanded for every allegation of the complainants.

But the denial nor the defense is mutual. The defendant railroad company is merely joining the issue and demanding the proofs. The burden is on the complainants to substantiate their charges. These are merely the preliminary skirmishes. The interesting part of the case will come when this evidence is produced, and we are advised that all the allegations will be substantiated by positive proofs, including the fact that the complainant is interested in the production and shipment of Pittsburgh coal.

Perhaps the most interesting feature of the answer is the confession also of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company that it has agreed to the complaint of Pittsburgh coal shippers, that the freight rates on Lake coal were discriminatory, and so far as concerns the justice of it, as to raise the West Virginia rates, but that the Interstate Commerce Commission has thus far refused to permit the movement to be made effective.

The Justice of the Pittsburgh coal shippers' complaint is, therefore, established. The only thing that remains is an adequate remedy. The railroads want an equalized rate by raising those of the West Virginia coal shippers and the Pittsburgh coal shippers would prefer that the equalization be effected by reducing the Pittsburgh district rates.

The difference is that of the point of view, and it will be for the Interstate Commerce Commission to arbitrate between the divergent interests. The verdict will probably lie between the lines.

OUT OF ITS OWN MOUTH IS IT CONDEMNED.

The condemned but unofficial Organ assured us that it is not a hypocrite, and but for certain and diverse circumstances we would incline to give the statement full faith and credence.

The circumstances lie in the fact that ever since the Unofficial Organ was born, as such by the official authorities of Connellsville, it has found serious fault with the administration of Connellsville's municipal affairs, a criticism which it did not have to offer before.

The conclusion is inevitable that the once esteemed Official Organ has been too indifferent of its own interests and too negligent of the interests of the taxpayers of Connellsville.

Out of its own mouth it condemned.

The attempt of private interests to hold up the Western Maryland railroad cannot be too severely criticized from a public standpoint, neither can it be too severely criticized from a patriotic standpoint. Public spirit seldom steps far beyond the line of public interest. The constituents in public service are entitled to expect for themselves rather than for the public good. While we cannot quarrel with their motives, we can only hope that they will be successful in their efforts so that there will be no serious interference with the work in which the whole community is vitally interested.

The entertainment of strangers and travelers without let or hindrance is established. The only thing that remains is an adequate remedy. THE KNIGHT OF THE SILVER A Romance Of Drusenland

Copyright, 1907, by R. F. Fenno & Co.

"The priests clamor for the sacrifice. The people clamor for it. You have had many enemies, Sir Verrall, since first you came to Drusenland, but with the priests against you, and with the people, how can you escape? For you cannot in this matter, Sir Verrall."

"I have a religion, too, your highness, and more is its very keystone. I were indeed false to my religion were I not to stand up for the lives of these prisoners, and, as for the danger to myself, it counts for nothing. Besides, these same priests have accepted me as the expected knight. That should make my person sacred to them."

"Even the expected knight will not be allowed to break the laws of Drusenland with impunity," she said.

"But for their own sake, they cannot deny me now. It would rob the people of their belief in the priests."

"They will not deny you, but they will seek for means to correct their mistake without confusing us in their selves."

"Your highness, it would seem, has little faith in the priests," I said gravely.

"Sir Verrall, I have a spirit within me which cries out for something more than legend—why I know not, except it be from the teaching of Jesus, who is called unorthodox and would be a sorry plight among his brethren had he not my protection."

"Your highness speaks truly," said Jesus.

"Why not claim the same protection, I ask."

"I am almost powerless to protect you. I know not how long I may have any power at all. There are those who love not a woman to rule, and that she breaks the laws may be an occasion to rise against her. It would be good to lay aside the golden circle that stamps me sovereign and be an other woman—always a woman and never a princess."

"It is not well said, your highness," said Jesus. "You were born to rule, and your duty lies in ruling."

"Ah, let me forget that I am more than a woman if it pleases me," she said pensively, and then she became calm again. "You was a strange coming unto us."

"It was indeed strange," I answered. "There is a reason in it, too," I went on in a dreamy manner. "It was the sun's summer, perhaps of the deeper truths which lie beneath. When the priests, speaking by their legends, proclaimed you the expected knight, the savior of this country of ours, they may have proclaimed a truth greater than they understood."

"I have thought that, your highness," I answered. "Tomorrow, Sir Verrall, I will command the three physicians be released, let no further danger come. Tomorrow I will send for you, and see that you forget not to crave my pardon publicly, even as publicly you angered me. Tonight has satisfied the woman; to-morrow satisfy the princess."

I fell upon my knees.

"You say you are almost powerless to protect me, but I am not powerless to protect you. In your danger claim me; I have a life to give. It is yours when you have it."

"Yes, I believe you," she answered. "As your princess I trust you. Yet I do not forget her who has a greater claim. Love abhors at queer marks sometimes. You are forgiven and I shall receive back the Lady Aldrida into favor."

"Your highness—" I began rising to my feet.

"You need not thank me. You will go as you came. Sir Verrall."

Jesus touched my arm and led me to the door, and I was shown to my quarters.

There was a council next day, and I expected to be called to it. I was in readiness to attend, ready to meet the opposition which was certain to be raised over the question of the two lives which were discussed, but I was not sent for. I kept to my quarters impatient at the delay, wondering if the princess had regretted her determination of last night to save the princesses and to recall me.

Late in the evening I was summoned to the palace. I passed through the streets unnoticed, but as soon as I entered the palace I was aware how unpopular I had become. I made my way at once to the room where the princess was, and there I was more kindly received. Her secret, I knew, prompted her for this, and I was not surprised when she told me she had recalled me, as it would have been unwise for those in closest attendance upon her to show any displeasure. I saw Lady Aldrida at some distance from me and was not displeased that she did not approach me. The princess was talking brightly to those close to her, but it seemed to me that she was exerting herself to appear at her ease, that her words were far from expressing what was passing through her mind.

Presently Jesus spoke to her, and her eyes wandered until they rested upon me. With a look and an almost imperceptible gesture she motioned me to approach.

"I am on my knees before her as I bade her last night, and I smiled to myself as I thought that I had already been for-upon my shoulder. In an instant my hand was upon my sword hilt.

"The second time you have received me—'an enemy,' Sir Verrall," said Jesus.

"It was your own advice that I should ten shadow and over be ready to defend myself," I answered.

"You are to be sentinel tonight?"

"Yes. I thank her highness for this mark of her trust in me."

"I am charged with a message."

"The sender?" I asked.

"For only one do I carry a message, Sir Verrall."

"What message, then?" I said, my eyes alight with a mischievous gleam.

"Do a faithful and loyal knight, and the God you worship grant you safe-ty."

"I pray so," I answered. "Tell me—"

"Sir Verrall is charged with no further speech, and I was detained with him."

He turned from me abruptly and with rapid strides left me.

The entrance to the princess' apartments was in a spacious corridor, which at one end was approached by a wide staircase, the other on leading to a large room, the entrance to which two soldiers stood at the head of the staircase, and they saluted me as I passed. Their faces were unfamiliar to me. I took up my position at the entrance and drew my sword. It was about 11 o'clock, as near as I could tell, and it was evident that the princess had not yet retired, for servants passed in and out of her apartments for some time after I arrived. But I caught no sight, nor sound, of her, though I watched each opening of the door and listened for any low murmur to recognize. Sounds came from other parts of the palace for some time, and it was certainly past midnight when the last servant left the apartments and I heard the door barred behind him.

A BAD COLD IS EASILY CURED.

The Most Severe Cold and Grippe
Malaria Will Be Relieved In Just A Few Hours.

There is not one grain of quinine in Pape's Cold Compound, which when taken every two hours, until three consecutive doses are taken, will surely end the grippe and break up the most severe cold either in the head or body, although it limits itself promptly to the most miserable neuralgic pains, headache, dizziness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, aching sore throat, running of the nose, catarrhal affections, soreness stiffness and rheumatic twinges.

Pape's Cold Compound is the result of three years research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars, and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment of colds or grippe.

Take this harmless Compound, as directed, with the knowledge that the makers of other medicine made any where else in the world which will cure you cold or end Grippe in less than a prompt and without any other instance or bad after effects as a 25 cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.
